"The kabobs, which are as lean as one could wish, well marinated and crisped from the open grill. They're generously portioned, and grilled carefully so they're cooked through but not dried out."

Phyllis C. Richman, The Washington Post

Call Me Moby Dick

"Their name may be odd, but Moby Dick's kabob houses know how to cook."

David Dorsen, The Washingtonian

A Whale of Bread

"There she blow! at Moby Dick, in Bethesda doesn't refer to a whale, but to the pita bread. It puffs up like a miniature white whale when it is pulled out the oven, then flattens into something more closely resembling the pita we know from the supermarket. But it is bigger, paler and much better."

Phyllis C. Richman, The Washington Post

"The King of Kabob"

"A Taste of Persia right in your Neighborhood"
